The ADM Institute is issuing a survey to collect data on successful postharvest loss interventions.

The survey is intended to expand on the literature review of an institute research study by tapping into the knowledge and experiences of professionals in this domain.

Much of the work done over the years on postharvest loss prevention may not be included in published sources. Therefore, the short (only 3 questions) survey calls on professionals to provide brief summary descriptions of 1 to 3 successful interventions.

Find out more about the survey on this page.
